

NARRATOR: Where do you go to find what's new in child welfare?

To find reliable news from the Children's Bureau and other organizations...and timely information to help you in your work to protect children and strengthen families?

All of this and more is available in CBX.

Children's Bureau Express...your connection to the best information in the child welfare field.

Released 10 times a year on the first business day of the month, each CBX issue brings you the latest news from the Children's Bureau, including information about legislation, grants and other Federal news, resources from CB's Training and Technical Assistance Network, site visits to grantees, and much more.

The Spotlight section focuses on a timely topic in every issue.

Topics that are important to your work, including:

- Differential Response
- Fostering Connections Legislation
- The CFSRs

And a special CBX 10th anniversary issue in March highlighting significant child welfare trends and events from the past decade.

Look for the "Next Issue" box to stay on top of what's coming up next.

Child Welfare News links you to the latest research on important topics such as safety, permanency, and well-being; the child welfare workforce; and up-to-date statistics on children and families.

Strategies and Tools for Practice supports your work with examples of promising practices from States and agencies...toolkits that help you improve outcomes...and pilot programs, evaluation data, and experiment results.

The Resources section describes the newest products for professionals and tells you how to find them online.

Training and Conferences gives you information about online courses, curricula, training events, and national conferences occurring in the next 3 months.

Past issues of CBX are always within reach. Browse archived issues back to 2000 by clicking on “Previous Issues” in the right navigation bar.
